

WHY WOULD YOU ENCOURAGE A PEER TO TAKE PART?

Key:

SK: Sandra Kiendler (teacher, BORG Bad Leonfelden)

JS: Jürgen Schacherl (teacher, Bundesgymnasium Bludenz)

SK: How would you encourage other teachers? Because I'm already a fan, but other teachers to run create your world to a generation Y. What would you say to them that would make them want to do the workshop or more workshops?

JS: That is a good question. I would say please do it because it's always good to broaden your own horizon. I mean, it's not just that the students have a fun afternoon, but you yourself learn stuff that you may be able to use in your own classroom. And I think especially for those teachers who are looking for ways to implement those ideas in their own classrooms in an interactive way, this would be a great workshop to learn a bit more and also to give kids an idea that also digital worlds at some points are created in somebody's head and have to be put on paper somewhere. And that's a great idea. Creating characters, creating storylines, and figuring out how those people move, also helps us as German teachers. When we talk about mythology and the way we tell stories about the hero's journey, all of those things that are important in our classrooms and it's nice to build a bridge between those different ideas of analog and digital.
